

Watch out for kids!

Summer has flown by and it's time for children to start back to school. That big yellow school bus is going to be stopping in front of you when you are in a hurry to get to work so:

- Leave a little earlier if you usually end up behind a school bus
- Watch for children standing in the road by the bus stops
- Do not pass a bus with red flashing lights
- Observe the speed limits in school zones
- Watch out for children crossing the roads

Let's strive for a safe and uneventful school year!

Helping your kids feel safe

MVEA was the first electric cooperative in the United States to join the national McGruff Truck Program 13 years ago. MVEA feels this program enhances and contributes to our communities' efforts to prevent crime and provide a safer, more caring environment for all its residents, especially children.

We feel that MVEA should serve in ways other than just providing utility service. The McGruff Truck Program provides children with an added measure of security. It lets them know that while they must be cautious with strangers, they have a way to identify people in a McGruff Truck who, though unknown to them, can be counted on to help them in an emergency.

Teach your children to recognize this symbol on the back and front of a utility truck. It identifies the utility service vehicles and their drivers as sources for help when someone is in trouble.
